

Beginning Beekeeping Class to Start at CC

By The Chronicle | Posted: Friday, March 25, 2016 9:06 pm

Beginning beekeeping classes will be held at Centralia College starting Monday, April 4. The classes are on 7-9 p.m. Mondays for six weeks, and held in Washington Hall, Room 103.

The classes will focus on the hobby, residential and small farm beekeeper. Emphasis will be put on the seasonal care of hives and colonies. The class style is networking, participation and interaction. Instructor is Tim Weible.

Discussions are focused on the needs and questions of class participants. There will be examples and hands-on learning aids. Students will see, hold, analyze and feel what the books only talk about. Participants gain a proactive knowledge base to keep bees happy, productive, healthy and safe.

The classes are sanctioned by the Washington State Beekeepers Association. Participants will receive a certificate and a shoulder patch from the beekeepers association.

For registration information, call (360) 736-9391, ext. 427.