Those looking to take classes at Centralia College are now able to register for spring quarter classes, which begin on April 4.

Many classes will accept students a few days into the quarter, with a wide range of choices to choose from, according to a press release from the college.

Students interested in academic transfer degrees can begin taking classes at the beginning of any quarter, with most disciplines available throughout the year.

The college offers two-year programs through Workforce Education, single-quarter classes and a wide variety of opportunities and workshops through its continuing education department.

Tuition discounts are available for those 50 and over, stated the release.

The college also offers bachelor's degrees in applied management and diesel technology. For more information about Centralia College programs or locations, call (360) 736-9391 or visit www.centralia.edu.
