

Centralia College Theatre Department to Perform 'This I Believe'

By The Chronicle | Posted: Tuesday, January 19, 2016 10:00 am

The Centralia College theatre department will share 20 different philosophies, read by campus and community colleagues, as a performance of "This I Believe" on Friday, Jan. 29, at 7 p.m. at the Corbet Theatre.

"This I Believe" is the personal philosophies of remarkable men and women and was the brainchild of famed journalist Edward R. Murrow six decades ago.

It was revived by NPR over the past five years.

"We're convinced that you will find the performance to be a unique evening of reflection, humor and inspiration," Brian Tyrrell, professor at Centralia College, said in an email.

Staff, students, instructors and local business owners will take part in the event. Admission is free.