A class titled Introduction to Geographic Information Systems will be offered at Centralia College East in Morton from April 8 to June 10. Classes will be on Fridays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

According to a press release, GIS is used in nearly every degree and profession. It is used to capture, store, manipulate, analyze, manage and present spatial data.

A hybrid class with in-person labs paired with online learning and online lectures are also available.

The community business option provides reduced tuition, and students can learn the skills for about $200.

To register, go online to www.centralia.edu, or call (360) 496-5022.
